There is only one Soviet hospital in Iran. It is located in Tehran.

It is operated by the Soviet Red Cross, but how it is nothing more than a center for spies. It consists of three or four buildings, two or three stories high. The doctor in charge lives in one of the buildings. The second floor of each building is given over to bed rooms. There are several single bed rooms, and the wards have from six to eight beds in them. In this hospital there are five or six Soviet doctors and 15 to 20 nurses who are Russian-Armenian. The lower class of help is Iranian. The personnel of doctors changes quite frequently. The equipment in this hospital is old, and much of it is inoperative. The services given are inferior to the services given by the Iranian Hospital. This hospital does have a fairly good X-ray, Physical Therapy and Dermatology Department. Patients are required to pay for their services, which in some cases exceed the charges of the Iranian Hospitals. The Soviet hospital at Tabriz was closed in

7. The Red Lion and Sun, the Red Cross of Iran, has as one of its many duties the gathering of blood. Blood generally is given voluntarily, but in some cases the donor, if destitute or in need of some necessities, is compensated. Transfusions are becoming more and more extinct, and hospitals are calling for blood reserves more and more so there is a necessity for the Red Lion and Sun to gather more blood. Local campaigns have been initiated in various cities and provinces for the collecting of blood during the past six months. More efficient ways for collecting, storing and distributing the blood are now being studied.
